

BOARD PROTESTS CLEVELAND BILL

Supervisors Consider $10 An Hour Lawyers Fees As Excessive

Acting upon instructions of the Will county board of supervisors, State's Attorney James E. Burke, announced Wednesday that he will appeal a decision given by County Judge George N. Blatt relative to attorney's fees to the supreme court of Illinois.

Judge Blatt handed down the decision on March 27 in the Cleveland condemnation suit, in which he held that Clarence M. Cleveland was entitled to recover $2,850.66 as "reasonable costs, expenses and attorney's fees in preparing the defense in the condemnation suit."

According to the records in the case, $2,165 of the judgments was for the law firm of Snapp, Heise & Snapp, representing a bill of 216 1/2 hours of legal service at $10 an hour.

The board contends the fee is excessive.

The suit was originally started on Dec. 1, 1932, when the state needed certain land on the Cleveland property to lay a concrete road from Mokena to the Lincoln highway a long the Wolf road. Court records show that after four different county judges heard various phases of the early legal battle, the case was finally settled out of court some time prior to February 10, 1936, after which Judge Blatt entered the judgment.

WIDOW OF FORMER TINLEY PASTOR DIES

Mrs. Anna Krebs, widow of the late Rev. August C. Krebs, passed away in the home of her son, Rudolf Krebs, at Plainfield, Ill., on Saturday evening, May 8th.

Anna Trusder was born in Mitweida, Saxony, Germany, on the first day of May, 1864. At the age of 18 years she came to America to be united in marriage with the Rev. A. C. Krebs, pastor of the Lutheran church in Tinley Park.

She served in the parsonages with her husband in addition to Tinley Park; at Shumway, Ill., Nilford, Ill., Knowles, Wisconsin, covering a period of 43 years of active ministry.

Rev. and Mrs. Krebs then retired from the ministry and moved to Clinton, Iowa, where they lived for about ten years. About a year and a half ago, they moved to Plainfield where she lived until her death.

Ten and a half years ago she suffered a paralytic stroke from which she never recovered, but remained an invalid until her death. She enjoyed the loving care of her husband until he passed away last July. She felt his loss very keenly and her desire was to follow after him, to be relieved from her sufferings and to enter upon her eternal rest. This wish was granted when she peacefully fell asleep last Saturday evening.

She leaves to mourn her departure three sons, Edmund and Rudolf both of Plainfield and the Rev. Louis G. of Davenport, Iowa and eight grandchildren. A son, Rev. Wm. E. Krebs passed away four years ago.

She reached the age of 73 years and 7 days.

Funeral services were held in the home at Plainfield, Ill., with the Rev. W. Burslaff of Forest Park, Ill., officiating, assisted by Rev. J. Goeken of Joliet, Ill. The Rev. A. Buddenhagen officiated at the grave in the Lutheran cemetery at Tinley Park, Tuesday afternoon May 11.

Tinley Trims Chicago Ridge

To open their home season the Tinley Park baseball team trimmed Chicago Ridge 6 to 0. It was Tinley's second victory in as many starts.

Pat Homerding and Co. blanked the ads from the ridge while compiling 6 runs. Pat was master of the situation at all times allowing no man to pass second base. Twice when the going was tough Pat's mates took matters into their own hands and double plays resulted. Tinley pounded on the Ridge hurler in the early innings and kept the runs coming in each inning until a safe margin allowed them to coast in.

A good sized crowd of local fans turned out and all on hand agreed that Tinley certainly has a potential winner this season.

Next Sunday, May 23rd the team travels to Blue Island trying for their third league win. The diamond is at 127th and the Rock Island tracks.

Don't forget to reserve Saturday evening June 12th for the Baseball Team's dance at the new Meister Brau gardens with Bob Phillips and his Florida Ambassadors providing the music.

Tinley Woman's Club Closes Year With Luncheon

To close the club year for the Tinley Park Women's Club, a spring luncheon took place at 12:30 o'clock Wednesday in the Mickenberry Tea Room, 95th and Western Avenue to which there were 36 members and friends present. The tables were graced with bouquet of lilacs and yellow tulips and at each place was a pretty little lady, made of crepe paper in yellow, orchid and pink, with a gathering of spring flowers in her skirt. The flowers were small candies. These were the hand work of the dean, Mrs. Albert Koehler, who was in charge of the luncheon and assisted by Mrs. Frank Baldwin and Mrs. Harry Uthe.

After the serving, the club president, Mrs. Omar Ebenhack, spoke a few appropriate words of welcome and then introduced the founder of the club, Mrs. Wallace B. Combs, who spoke words of praise for each officer and member of the club and then who told of her trip to Tulsa, Okla., where she attended the General Federation of Women's Clubs convention, and of the State convention at Peoria last week.

Mrs. Ebenhack introduced each officer and chairman and recognized their co-operative work in the club during the past year.

Mrs. Trudie Swisher was next presented and who read by request her contribution to the Literary contest of the third district in which she won honors. It was an Indian Lullaby and showed the quiet and peaceful life of an Indian family of which Mrs. Swisher was in direct contact formerly.

The program chairman, Mrs. Chas. Crist, was next introduced, who presented Mrs. R. H. Hodgman of Oak Forest, who sang a group of songs, accompanying herself. The songs were: "A Kiss" by Ardit; "Miss Spring" by Mary Willard, and "I Love A Little Cottage" by O'Hara. They were very sweetly rendered.

Next to be presented was Mrs. Arthur Miner of Blue Island and who formerly as Miss Elizabeth Cammeron taught school near Tinley Park. She gave a group of readings in a pleasing and dramatic way which was most entertaining and enjoyable.

Thus closed another club year, but with plans already made for the work again in the fall.

Forest Preserve Visitors Urged To Spare Wild Flowers

A carpet of wild flowers, destined to change its design as the season advances, covers the woodlands of the forest preserves and our forests in this locality. So that the crop will increase each year, Clayton F. Smith, president of the board of Forest Preserve Commissioners, pleads with visitors to look at the blossoms, but not to pick them.

Picking blossoms of wild flowers kills the plant, and the picker has, on his arrival home, merely a handful of wilted stems. A few generations ago, the entire state of Illinois was covered with wild flowers each spring. Constant picking of the blossoms now makes wild flowers almost a rarity.

Forest preserve district police will maintain strict watching to see that wild flowers are not picked.

Clayton F. Smith said, "We are determined to restore this natural beauty to the forests, and maybe,

The GARDEN MURDER CASE

Zalia Graem glared defiantly at Vance.

"I asked Mrs. Garden what I could do for her, and she requested me to fill the water glass on the little table beside her bed. I went into the bathroom and filled it; then I arranged her pillows and asked her if there was anything else she wanted. She thanked me and shook her head; and I returned to the drawing-room."

"Thank you," murmured Vance, nodding to Miss Graem and turning to the nurse. "Miss Beeton," he asked, "when you returned last night, was the bedroom window which opens on the balcony bolted?"

The nurse seemed surprised at the question. But when she answered, it was in a calm, professional tone.

"I didn't notice. But I know it was bolted when I went out."

He turned leisurely to Floyd Garden. "I say, Garden when you left the drawing-room yesterday afternoon, to follow Swift on your errand of mercy, as it were, after he had given you his bet on Equanimity, where did you go with him?"

"I led him into the dining-room." The man was at once troubled and aggressive. "I argued with him for a while, and then he came out and went down the hall to the stairs. I watched him for a couple of minutes, wondering what else I might do about it, for, to tell you the truth, I didn't want him to listen in on the race upstairs. I was pretty damned sure Equanimity wouldn't win, and he didn't know I hadn't placed his bet. I was rather worried about what he might do. For a minute I thought of following him upstairs, but changed my mind."

Vance lowered his eyes to the desk and was silent for several moments, smoking meditatively.

"I'm frightfully sorry, and all that," he murmured at length, without looking up; "but the fact is, we don't seem to be getting any forrader. There are plausible explanations for everything and everybody. Assuming—merely as a hypothesis—that anyone here could be guilty of the murder of Swift, of the apparent attempt to murder Miss Beeton, and of the possible murder of Mrs. Garden, there is nothing tangible to substantiate an individual accusation. The performance was too clever, too well conceived, and the innocent persons seem unconsciously and involuntarily to have formed a conspiracy to aid and abet the murderer."

Vance looked up and went on.

"Moreover, nearly everyone has acted in a manner which conceivably would make him appear guilty. There have been an amazing number of accusations. Mr. Kroon was the first victim of one of those unsubstantiated accusations. Miss Graem has been pointed out to me as the culprit by several persons. Mrs. Garden last night directly accused her son. In fact, there has been a general tendency to involve various people in the criminal activities here. From the human and psychological point of view the issue has been both deliberately and unconsciously clouded, until the confusion was such that no clear-cut outline remained. And this created an atmosphere which perfectly suited the murderer's machinations, for it made detection extremely difficult and positive proof almost impossible. . . . And yet," Vance added, "some one in this room is guilty."

He rose dejectedly. I could not understand his manner; it was so unlike the man as I had always known him. All of his assurance seemed gone. Then he swung round quickly, and his eyes swept angrily about the room, resting for a brief moment on each one present.

"Furthermore," he said with a staccato stress on his words, "I know who the guilty person is!" There was an uneasy stir in the room and a short tense silence which was broken by Doctor Siefert's cultured voice.

"If that is the case, Mr. Vance—and I do not doubt the sincerity of your statement—I think it your duty to name that person."

Vance regarded the doctor thoughtfully for several moments before answering. Then he said in a low voice: "I think you are right, sir." Again he paused and, lighting a fresh cigarette, moved restlessly up and down in front of the window. "First, however," he said stopping suddenly, "there's something upstairs I wish to look at again—to make sure. . . . You will all please remain here for a few minutes." And he moved swiftly toward the door. At the threshold he hesitated and turned to the nurse. "Please come with me, Miss Beeton, I think you can help me."

The nurse rose and followed Vance into the hall. A moment later we could hear them mounting the stairs.

Fully five minutes passed, and then the tense silence of the room was split by a woman's frenzied and terrifying cry for help, from somewhere upstairs. As we reached the hallway the nurse came stumbling down the stairs, holding with both hands to the bronze railing. Her face was ghastly pale.

"Mr. Markham! Mr. Markham!" she called hysterically. "Oh, my God! The most terrible thing has happened!"

She had just reached the foot of the stairs when Markham came up to her. She stood clutching the railing for support.

"It's Mr. Vance!" she panted excitedly. "He's—gone!"

A chill of horror passed over me, and everyone in the hall seemed stunned.

In broken phrases, interspersed with gasping sobs, the nurse was explaining to Markham.

"He went over—Oh, God, it was terrible! He said he wanted to ask me something, and led me out into the garden. He began questioning me about Doctor Siefert, and Professor Garden, and Miss Graem. And while he talked he moved over to the parapet—you remember where he stood last night. He got up there again, and looked down. I was frightened—the way I was yesterday. And then—and then—while

"Miss Beeton, I Think You Can Help Me."

I was talking to him—he bent over, and I could see—oh, God—he had lost his balance." She stared at Markham wild-eyed. "I reached toward him. . . . and suddenly he wasn't there any more. . . . He had gone over!"

Her eyes lifted suddenly over our heads and peered past us transfixed. A sudden change came over her. Her face seemed contorted into a hideous mask. Following her horrified gaze, we instinctively turned and glanced up the hallway toward the drawing-room.

There, near the archway, looking calmly toward us, was Vance.

"I told you last night, Miss Beeton," he was saying, his eyes resting sternly on the nurse, "that no gambler ever quits with his first winning bet, and that in the end he always loses." He came forward a few steps. "You won your first gamble, at long odds, when you murdered Swift. And your poisoning of Mrs. Garden with the barbitol also proved a winning bet. But when you attempted to add me to your list of victims, because you suspected I knew too much—you lost. That race was fixed—you hadn't a chance."

The nurse, who had been staring at Vance as if petrified, suddenly relaxed her hold on the stair railing, and her hands went to her face in a gesture of hopelessness and despair.

"Yes!" she cried at Vance; "I tried to kill you. Why shouldn't I? You were about to take everything—everything—away from me."

She turned quickly and ran up the stairs. Almost simultaneously Vance dashed forward.

"Quick, quick!" he called out. "Stop her before she gets to the garden."

But before any of us realized the significance of his words, Vance was himself on the stairs. Heath and Snitkin were just behind him, and the rest of us, stupefied, followed. As I came out on the roof, I could see Miss Beeton running toward the far end of the garden, with Vance immediately behind her. Twilight had nearly passed, and a deep dusk had settled over the city. As the girl leaped up on the parapet at the same point where Vance had stood the night before, she was like a spectral silhouette against the faintly glowing sky. And then she disappeared down into the deep shadowy abyss, just before Vance could reach her.

CHAPTER XV

A half hour later we were all seated in the den again. Heath and the detectives had gone out immediately after the final catastrophe to attend to the unpleasant details occasioned by Miss Beeton's suicide.

Vance was once more in the chair at the desk. The tragic termination of the case seemed to have saddened him. He smoked gloomily for a few minutes. Then he spoke. "I asked all of you to stay because I felt you were entitled to an explanation of the terrible events that have taken place here, and to hear why it was necessary for me to conduct the investigation in the manner I did. To begin with, I knew from the first that I was dealing with a very shrewd and unscrupulous person."

"I was inclined to suspect Miss Beeton almost from the first, for, although everyone here had, through some act, drawn suspicion upon himself, only the nurse had the time and the unhampered opportunity to commit the initial crime. She was entirely unobserved when she put her plan into execution; and so thoroughly familiar was she with every arrangement of the household, that she had no difficulty in timing her every step so as to insure this essential privacy."

"Subsequent events and circumstances added irresistibly to my suspicion of her. For instance, when Mr. Floyd Garden informed me where the key to the vault was kept, I sent her to see if it was in its place, without indicating to her where its place was, in order to ascertain if she knew where the key hung. Only someone who knew exactly how to get into the vault at a moment's notice could have been guilty of killing Swift."

"Incidentally, one of my great difficulties in the case has been to act in such a way, at all times, that her suspicions would not be aroused at any point."

"Her motive was not clear at first," Vance explained, "and, unfortunately, I thought that by Swift's death alone she had accomplished her purpose. But after my talk with Doctor Siefert this morning, I was able to understand fully her whole hideous plot. Doctor Siefert pointed out definitely her interest in Floyd Garden, although I had had hints of it before. For instance, Floyd Garden was the only person here about whom she spoke to me with admiration. Her motive was based on a colossal ambition—the desire for financial security, ease and luxury; and mixed with this over-weening desire was a strange twisted love. These facts became clear to me only today."

Vance glanced at young Garden. "It was you she wanted," he continued. "And I believe her self-assurance was such that she did not doubt for a minute that she would be successful in attaining her goal."

Garden sprang to his feet.

"Good God, Vance!" he exclaimed. "You're right. I see the thing now. She has been making up to me for a long time; and, to be honest with you, I may have said and done things which she could have construed as encouragement—God help me!" He sat down again in dejected embarrassment.

"No one can blame you," Vance said kindly. "She was one of the shrewdest women I have ever encountered. But the point of it all is, she did not want only you—she wanted the Garden fortune as well. That's why, having learned that Swift would share in the inheritance, she decided to eliminate him and leave you the sole beneficiary. But this murder did not, by any means constitute the whole of her scheme."

Vance again addressed us in general.

"Her whole terrible plot was clarified by some other facts that Doctor Siefert brought out this morning during my talk with him. The death, either now or later, of Mrs. Garden was also an important integer of that plot; and Mrs. Garden's physical condition had, for some time, shown certain symptoms of poisoning. Of late these symptoms have increased in intensity. Doctor Siefert informed me that Miss Beeton had been a laboratory assistant to Professor Garden during his experiments with radio-active sodium, and had often come to the apartment here for the purpose of typing notes and attending to other duties which could not conveniently be performed at the university. Doctor Siefert also informed me that she had actually entered the household here about two months ago, to take personal charge of Mrs. Garden's case. She had, however, continued to assist Professor Garden occasionally in his work and naturally had access to the radio-active sodium he had begun to produce."

Vance turned his eyes to Professor Garden. "And you too, sir," he said, "were, as I see it, one of her intended victims. When she planned to shoot Swift I believe she planned a double murder—that is, you and Swift were to be shot at the same time. But, luckily, you had not returned to your study."

"But—but," stammered the professor, "how could she have killed me and Woody too?"

Nature Esteemed by Chinese
Nature is close to the life of every Chinese, says Nature Magazine. All the feathered folk that go to make up the finishing touches for the charm of the out-of-doors are held in high regard by the laborer, the student, the water-shop keeper. More than mere incidents in the complete scheme of all things natural and of the earth, they were long ago given a rank of high importance in Chinese literature, art, and science. Perhaps, too, that is the secret of the abundance of bird life in China, in spite of the fact that the country has suffered periodic cycles of famine and scarcity since the dawn of history. Evidently this love has been so sincere that the birds have been preserved, Lazy men with brilliant minds think out revolutions, but they never push them.

If a man doesn't like another he never smiles on him. That's how "another" knows it.

Winning success uses up too much of a man's life. How much time has he to enjoy living?

A word to the wise is usually more than sufficient. They've thought of "that" already.

No use telling boys that war is always wrong when there are statues to soldiers everywhere.

All the efficiency experts, if they could hold a convention, couldn't think of a way out of a depression.

AROUND the HOUSE

Items of Interest to the Housewife

Fitting Your Hat—If you have a tight felt hat, hold it in the steam of a boiling kettle. When the felt is thoroughly damp it is easy to stretch it to the right size.

Milk Puddings—Orange peel shredded very finely makes an excellent flavoring for milk puddings. It is a pleasant change from nutmeg when added to rice pudding or baked custard.

Rust Remover—Onion juice will remove rust from tableware.

Keeping Cheese Moist—To prevent it from becoming dry, keep it wrapped in butter muslin, or in the glazed hygienic paper in which some bread is wrapped.

Stewed Macaroni—Boil one pound macaroni in milk and water for three-quarters of an hour.

adding one-fourth ounce butter, salt, and an onion stuck with cloves. Afterwards, drain the macaroni, add three ounces grated cheese, a little nutmeg, pepper, and a little milk or cream. Stew gently for five minutes and serve very hot.

Protecting Mirrors—Keep mirrors out of the sun—it will cause spots and other blemishes.

Tough Pastry—Too much water will make pastry tough.

Cleaning Combs, Brushes—A teaspoon of ammonia in a quart of water will remove all grease and dirt from combs and brushes, after which they should be rinsed and dried in the sun.

Save Stockings—If stockings persistently wear out at the toes, try buying them one-half size larger.

Devised Egg Lillies—Hard cook as many eggs as there are to be servings. Chill, then peel carefully. With a sharp knife cut strips from the large end to the center; remove yolks, mash and season with salt, pepper, mayonnaise and a little Worcestershire sauce. Carefully refill cavities having the white strips form the petals of the "lily." Lay each on a bed of curly endive. Accompany with cheese straws.

Making Cocoa—Cocoa loses that raw taste if made with half milk and half water, then boiled. More nutritious and digestible too.

The Curse of Progress

He Gets 'Em Up

"That," said the native proudly, pointing out a passer-by, "is Jonathan Bell, native of Squash Center, and the man who has aroused more people than any other man in the country."

"You don't mean to tell me that quiet-looking man is some great communist or radical, do you?" inquired the stranger.

"Not at all," was the reply. "He's a retired alarm-clock manufacturer."

Life's Little Trials

"Pa, what's the difference between a hill and a pill?"

"I don't know, my son, unless it's that a hill is high and a pill is round—is that it?"

"Naw! A hill is hard to get up and a pill is hard to get down."

Substitute

"Tommy, what is a synonym?" the teacher asked.

"A synonym," said Tommy wisely, "is a word you use when you can't spell the other one."

GOOD SPIRITS

By GLUYAS WILLIAMS

Uncle Phil Says:

Could We But Hear—

We laugh over the "private lives" of the ancients. What will posterity think is the funniest about ours?

It is softies who object to critics. Criticism—good criticism—is what there is not nearly enough of. But there are overwhelming oceans of gush. A good scold is preferable to a smearer of molasses.

One regrets his past about as much when it has been full of empty boredom as when it has been full of sinfulness.

A woman with little money, but much taste, will make a small, shabby house into "a vineclad cottage."

They Stand Alone—

Dominating natures that always choose their friends, sometimes wistfully wish some one would choose them, just for a change.

We realize what an offense swearing is when a woman indulges in it.

You can not really like an egotistic man, but at times you admire him.

We see now the weakness of a big nation. It spends too much money. Little ones seldom do.

Wild Anger

Small fits of anger are like campfires that are likely to become forest fires if not extinguished.

Don't Sleep When Gas Presses Heart

If you want to really GET RID OF GAS and terrible bloating, don't expect to do it by just doctoring your stomach with harsh, irritating alkalies and "gas tablets." Most GAS is lodged in the stomach and upper intestine and is due to old poisonous matter in the constipated bowels that are loaded with ill-causing bacteria.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable. You can't eat or sleep. Your head aches. Your back aches. Your complexion is sallow and pimply. Your breath is foul. You are a sick, grouchy, wretched unhappy person. YOUR SYSTEM IS POISONED.

Thousands of sufferers have found in Adlerika the quick, scientific way to rid their systems of harmful bacteria. Adlerika rids you of gas and cleans foul poisons out of BOTH upper and lower bowels. Give your bowels a REAL cleansing with Adlerika. Get rid of GAS. Adlerika does not gripe—is no habit forming. At all Leading Druggists.

Hold to Your Friends

The friends thou hast and their adoption tried, grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel.—William Shakespeare.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

Time For Action

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

While official Washington wrangles over the tax burden and possible methods of retrenchment, the Government shows no signs of reducing its costliest feature.

That is the long, long payroll composed of public jobholders.

During the month of March, for example, while economy discussion crowded the news columns, the Executive branch jumped its payroll by 2860 employees—reaching a total on March 31, of approximately 830,000.

That's bigger than the population of at least ten of our states. And it doesn't include employees of the legislative, military, or judicial branches of the Federal government.

Their inclusion would raise still higher the total of Federal jobholders
—all paid regularly out of public funds charged against the American worker and earner.

For March, alone, according to official reports, the bill exceeded $128,000,000.

Naturally the public asks why, with so much talk of economy, something isn't done to lighten this particular burden.

Nor is the public alone in its question.

Various commissions, including at least one Senatorial group, have recommended a plan of reorganization which, by eliminating some excess bureaus and merging others, could assure real progress toward efficient and economic administration of our national affairs.

But so far as Congress itself is concerned, there has been little, if any, action on this proposal.

Independent studies have approved the plan. A committee of Senate members recommends it. The public demands economy. Apparently only the beneficiaries of Bureaucracy themselves are opposed.

Whatever program of retrenchment may ultimately be adopted—whether it follows this or some other practical plan—the time has definitely come for Congress to stop talking economy and to act instead.

Tulip Time In

Holland, Michigan

"Tulip Time" has made the city of Holland, Michigan a mecca for the lovers of the picturesque and beautiful.

By no people in the United States have the quaint customs of a fath-erland been treasured more than by those from the Netherlands of Europe, not as a daily usage but as a vehicle for enhancing festival occasions.

In this city, which is the center of 30,000 people of Dutch birth or descent, the institution of "Tulip Time" has attained international note because of its adherence to the authentic Freedom from commercialism, ballyhoo and carnival has been rigidly adhered to.

Nine years ago the "Tulip Time" idea had its inception. By 1930 plantings of bulbs had reached such proportion as to warrant the first festival program. The plantings have been augmented from year to year and three million bulbs are now in place comprising eight miles of tulip lanes, that is, residential streets bordered on either side with endless varieties. Mass plantings in parks and nurseries greet the visitors at many points. The municipal park board provides the bulbs and handles the horticultural work. Owners of private gardens vie with one another in their efforts to excel in their tulip displays.

The Festival runs for nine days.
The opening ceremony is the scrubbing of the streets. Hundreds of men and women in Dutch costume, the men in puff breeches (pof broeken) and the women in tight bodices and full skirts and all in wooden shoes (klompen), engage in making the streets of "Tulip Town" clean and spotless. On the streets of "Tulip Town" are flower girls with yokes and baskets (bloemenmanden) filled with tulips, and milk carts drawn by dogs as in the Land of Dikes.

Old men with long pipes and native garb frequent the Coffee Shops for the daily "Koffie Kletz". The shops abound in Dutch merchandise.

All this beauty and quaintness is marred by one thing, and that is the wretched handling of traffic. No pretense is made to keep traffic on the move with the result that the streets are jammed with traffic snarls. Cars fill three lanes of the pavement and it takes an hour to go one mile in this jam. Often cars are run on the sidewalks with the hope of getting out of the jam. If the Chamber of Commerce of Holland, Michigan would take the matter up with their city council to provide better means of handling the traffic, visitors to Holland would feel like coming back again and at the same time would be given a better opportunity to enjoy the floral beauties.

It is to be hoped that the Chamber of Commerce can bring about better traffic handling before the next tulip festival.

WEAR A V. F. W. BUDDY POPPY

MEMORIAL DAY

V. F. W. PLANS ANNUAL BUDDY POPPY SALE

The Buddy Poppy is the copyrighted name of the flower sponsored by the V. F. W. in an annual nationwide sale every year since 1922.

The poppies themselves are assembled by disabled veterans in government hospitals, who receive nominal wages for their work. The poppy, which first was sold on a country-wide scale by the V. F. W., was selected as the memorial flower because of its association in the minds of all Americans with the poppies of Flanders Fields.

Local participation in the sixteenth annual Buddy Poppy sale sponsored throughout the country by the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, is being planned in conjunction with the nationwide custom of conducting the sales prior to Memorial Day, Sunday, May 30th. The entire proceeds of the sale will be used for the relief and welfare work of the V. F. W. among disabled and needy veterans of this vicinity, and for the national program of veteran rehabilitation and child welfare sponsored by more than 3,500 units of the organization throughout the country.

One of the most widely known philanthropies of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States is the V. F. W. National Home for war orphans at Eaton Rapids, Mich., where the overseas veterans' organization is caring for the children of deceased war veterans.

The V. F. W. National Home and our program of care for our disabled comrades and their dependents constitute a voluntary obligation for which our organization members alone are responsible.

The annual Buddy Poppy sale is the one occasion of the year when we invite the people of America to share in this privilege of caring for the men, women and children whose lives were most affected by the World War. Those who buy V. F. W. Buddy Poppies will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are contributing in a practical way, to the work our organization is doing in memory of America's soldier dead.

Non-High School Districts to Share In State Aid Plan

Non-high school districts are to participate in the state aid plan for schools now under consideration by the legislature. High school and non-high school districts are now neglected. Many non-high school boards, because of shrinking valuations and increased high school attendance, have found it impossible to pay the high school tuition of their children, necessitating personal tuition payments by parents in some places in order to secure a high school education for their children.

The 59th General Assembly dealt with this problem by permitting non-high school districts to further tax themselves. Some districts, although they have increased their non-high rate to the new limit set by the General Assembly, find that they cannot pay current tuition claims, to say nothing of their inability to pay bills past due. The law enacted by the present legislature, permitting non-high school districts by referendum to bond themselves to pay past tuition and to further tax themselves to pay for the bonds, will not solve the problem as long as the district cannot pay current claims.

Irving F. Pearson, county superintendent of schools in Winnebago county, in northern Illinois, recently issued a statement showing that although the non-high school district of his county is now taxing itself to the new limit set by the General Assembly the income will not pay current tuition claims and the district has a large bill for unpaid tuition which it has not been able to pay in previous years. Pearson points out that the plan now before the legislature, providing state aid of $20 per pupil for non-high school districts, would solve the problem of the non-high school board.

Large uncollectable bills for the tuition of non-high school pupils are serious problems for many high school boards. Faced with the problem of educating their own children on decreased resources, the high school boards find it difficult to continue to educate the children from the non-high school districts without full tuition payment. The Highland Park Twp. H. S. board holds unpaid tuition bills for $41,000; other examples are—Joliet Twp. H. S. $16,000, Mt. Vernon Twp. H. S. $42,000, Springfield $41,000, Rockford $85,000, Waukegan Twp. H. LOU MEYER GETS BILL CUMMINGS' NUMBER FOR 500-MILE RACE -- THERE'S DEUCE TO PAY!

This score may be changed by the General Assembly this session. Some emergency relief has been voted for high schools and the question of permanent support is being considered. State aid to elementary schools in Illinois is below the national average and the high schools have been entirely neglected, causing enormous inequalities in the opportunities of children for an education, and placing the total burden of high school support on the local property tax. Recently this problem has become acute, for since 1927 the assessed valuation of property in Illinois has decreased 40 percent and high school enrollment has increased 40 percent. Some boards of education find that they cannot continue to operate unless some new method of financing high schools is found.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — Deuces Wild!

The numbers game is being played by two of the most popular drivers in the 500-mile race Monday, May 31.

Louie Meyer, pleasant-mannered, steel-nerved triple winner of the Indianapolis speed classic—1928, 1933 and 1936—recently enlisted in the racing team of Mike Boyle, Chicago sportsman.

Wild Bill Cummings, fearless, ever-smiling winner of 1934, was already safely ensconced as the star of the team. And Bill's car had won a big No. 2 in last year's race. Cummings was left at the post when he broke a clutch and "finished" last in the field of 33 cars.

This year, Lou Meyer wears No. 2

by virtue of finishing second in National AAA championship rating.

When "Cotton" Henning, team manager for Boyle, informed Cummings he must surrender No. 2 to Meyer, Wild Bill grinned and said: "It's yours, Lou, but don't get caught in the clutch!"

Cummings slips down to No. 16, but he's happy to be rid of his hard-luck number.

3. Mr. James G. Gurley, New Lenox, Ill.
4. Mr. Luther G. Blatt, Elwood, Illinois.
5. Miss Sybley Gibson, Lockport, Illinois.
6. Mrs. Mildred Brown, Joliet, Ill.
7. Mr. E. F. Booth, Co. Supt. of Schools.

And that these seven principals and teachers have been studying several sets of geographies:

1. Mr. Paul Gerhardt, Beecher, Ill.
2. Mr. M. F. Stone, Lockport, Ill.
3. Mr. Verne E. Crackel, Crete, Illinois.
4. Miss Frances M. Delaney, Assistant Supt. of Schools.
5. Mr. J. W. Knater, Rockdale, Illinois.
6. Miss Doris Lehmann, Monee, Illinois.
7. Mrs. Mary Carkhuff, Joliet, Ill.

This policy was adopted by my office the minute I came into it for the reason that the judgment of seven educators should be better than just the judgment of E. F. Booth when school books are to be changed.

It is impossible for any layman to appreciate the amount of work and the amount of grief that these fourteen instructors have gone through in finally reaching a decision. For a committee member to listen to eight or ten salesmen from time to time over such a long period and then to get into these texts and study them, checking carefully their merits and demerits is no easy task. I wish to thank these fourteen committee members for the patience, industry, and absolute honesty in all their work.

I sincerely hope that no more school book changes will be necessary while I am in office. After considerable discussion, the health committee unanimously selected the MacMillan Health Books from grades one to eight; the Geography Committee had a more difficult task. At their first meeting they voted to withhold judgment for another two weeks and to concentrate as to which they should eventually choose, the Ginn and Co., series, the Rand McNally series or the Winston series. At our recent Principals and Superintendents' meeting at the Woodruff Inn in Joliet, the Winston series was finally adopted.

I know that the boys and girls, the teachers and the patrons in general of Will County schools will appreciate the work done by these committees and they will approve of and be enthusiastic about these books as soon as they become familiar with them. In my opinion, there are no better health books and no better geography books than the ones selected.

Will County Supt. of Schools.

Debt—and H. C. L.

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Within the past few weeks the nation has heard protests from two great groups of citizens against increasing costs of living. They ask protection from the threat of further rises.

During the same period it has learned that our national debt has passed the thirty-five billion dollar mark—reaching an all-time high.

To economists these facts bear an interesting relation to each other.

Why? Not only because a thirty-five billion dollar debt means a mortgage of $70 against the future earnings of every man, woman and child in America. . . .

Not only because public debt has an unpleasant habit of stretching over future generations, and thus constitutes a lien on the labors of future generations. . . .

Not only because public debt means, in reality, postponed taxes, which both this and the coming generation must pay. . . .

But also because excessive public debt is generally recognized by economists as the road to inflation—with all its ballooning of the cost of living.

Despite promises of balanced budgets, our national debt has continued its steady ascent during recent years. Billion by billion it has climbed to its present altitude.

Again Washington has promised that the mad ascent will cease. Congress must be reminded of that pledge.

For if our public debt continues to mount, and brings the threatened inflation in its train, fantastic rises in the cost of living will no longer constitute a mere threat. They can become a grim and tragic reality.

Just What Does It All Mean to Me?

That is the question that naturally comes to your mind when you think of or talk to your neighbors about the rather bewildering activities of the federal government in Washington.

Fragmentary news reports of congressional action or administration policies often are confusing, but if you will read William Bruckart's interpretative WASHINGTON DIGEST, which is published each week in this paper, you will know more about what all the moves on the capital checkerboard mean to you.

Through long service as a Washington correspondent, Mr. Bruckart is particularly well qualified for this particular job. He gives you an illuminating interpretation of what Congress is doing or is expected to do, and what is happening or is expected to happen in other departments of the government.

READ the Bruckart letter every week for an intelligent understanding of what is going on at the national capital.

ILLINOIS
BREVITIES

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Chambers of Milledgeville observed their 64th wedding anniversary. Mr. Chambers is a Civil war veteran.

A fire and explosion at the Hotel Kankakee in Kankakee routed 100 guests from their beds and sent them scurrying to the street in scanty attire.

Charles Johnson, farmer, celebrated his one hundredth birthday anniversary at Wenona. His formula for long life is eat anything you like and plenty of it, work hard, live physically and morally right.

At the annual meeting of the University of Illinois Mothers' association in Urbana, Mrs. William S. Robertson was elected president for the next year and Mrs. Frank P. Cogdal, also of Urbana, was named secretary.

Joseph E. Desotell, a native of Aurora, died in his home there at the age of eighty-four. He was a Burlington railroad mechanic for more than fifty years. Surviving are his widow, Melvina, and seven children.

William Lyon Phelps, professor of English literature at Yale, will deliver the baccalaureate address at the University of Illinois on Sunday, June 13. Approximately 2,000 students will receive degrees on June 14.

Isaac N. Peasley, eighty-five years old, who, as a pioneer farm boy, broke prairie land with oxen and herded cattle in the open country, died at Heyworth. When he was fourteen years old he bought horses for government use in the union army during the civil war.

Oliver R. Trowbridge, of Bloomington, seventy - six years of age, prominent in legal and educational circles, died at St. Joseph's hospital following a stroke of paralysis last December. Mr. Trowbridge was the author of the civics textbook, "Illinois and the Nation," used at Illinois State Normal university and many other schools and colleges.

Three members of one family were killed and three other persons injured in an auto crash near Du Quoin. The dead: Mrs. Pearl Wynn, thirty-five, Vergennes, Ill.; her son, Lawrence, six, and daughter, Ada Belle, four. The injured: Floyd Wynn, forty-three, husband of Mrs. Wynn, and their twin sons, Harold and Hubert, eleven. They are expected to recover.

For five years Barney Paulsen, twenty-one years old, former assistant cashier of the Deerfield State bank, must stay away from taverns and night clubs. He must pay back $2,500 which he stole from the bank, and he must live with his parents in Northfield. On these conditions Judge Charles E. Woodward of Chicago suspended a sentence of a year and a day in Leavenworth penitentiary, imposed on Paulsen when he pleaded guilty on April 13.

Cracksmen broke into the post-office of Braidwood in Will county and lugged out a 800 pound safe. Their evident plan was to load it into a car and open it at leisure. But the safe slipped and fell into the muddy alley back of the post office, combination down. Despite the burglars' desperate efforts the safe sank deeper. Finally the gang gave it up, broke their way into the M. P. Keyes grocery next door and laboriously cracked open a cash register. It was empty.

Henry Churchill Edwards, eighty-nine years old, Waukegan, one of the first white children born in Lake county, died at the Victory Memorial hospital in Waukegan. He was the father of the late Judge Claire C. Edwards of the Lake county circuit court. Mr. Edwards was born in Avon township, near Round lake, the son of Churchill Edwards, who settled in Lake county in 1834. He served ten years as a member of the county board of supervisors, part of the time as chairman. Surviving Mr. Edwards are four children, Mrs. Hervey C. Coulson and Harry J. Russell, H., and John Edwards, all of Waukegan; twenty grandchildren, and a brother, William, seventy-nine.

A picture of what is described as a "chaotic condition" in the school systems of forty-two Illinois counties was drawn by the Cook County League of Women Voters, whose department of government and education, in a canvass of county school superintendents, discovered 706 school districts, in thirty-six counties, serving only ten pupils each. With forty-two of the 102 counties reporting, the league found evidence of "a senseless waste of educational funds," according to Mrs. Philip Ringer, chairman of the department which conducted the canvass. Thirty-three counties reported 116 districts with fewer than five pupils and nine counties reported a total of twenty-three districts with no pupils at all.

George N. Warde, general director of the Loyal Order of Moose and one-time associate of the late Samuel Gompers in the American Federation of Labor, died in his home at Aurora.

Gov. Henry Horner will be presented with an honorary degree of doctor of laws at the annual commencement exercises at Illinois college, Jacksonville, on June 7, it was announced by Harold C. Jaquith, president of the college. Governor Horner will deliver the commencement address to the graduating class.

Lesson for May 23

THE WEAKNESS OF ESAU

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 25:27-34; 27:41-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. I Corinthians 9:25.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Twin Brothers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Twin Brothers Trading.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Winning by Self-Control.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Conquering Appetite and Greed.

One of the difficult and at the same time challenging things about teaching the Word of God is that its divine precepts are diametrically opposed to the current philosophy of men. In our lesson of last week we saw that meekness and forbearance are strong and commendable qualities in a world which magnifies brute force. Today we are to study a portion of Scripture which shows the folly of living for the flesh, and we are living in a world where the flesh and its appetites are given full sway.

Professors in many colleges are openly advocating the free exercise of every fleshly appetite as a normal expression of life. Morality is cast off; the flesh rules. Many of the nations of the earth look upon boys and girls as merely so many physical units useful in a future war. Motherhood has been degraded into an animal-like function, solely for the breeding of more manpower. One nation recently advocated as great an increase as possible in the birth of illegitimate children to be cared for by the state as a measure of national security. One shudders to mention such unspeakable wickedness, but even so we have only touched the surface.

Is it true that man is but a beast? Is there no spirit in man capable of fellowship with God? Has the moral law of God been abrogated? The story of Esau and Jacob is most pointed and instructive in its answer to such questions. Two New Testament quotations have been chosen to express the truth of an Old Testament lesson; namely, Galatians 5:17, and 6:7.

I. "The Flesh Lusteth Against the Spirit" (Gen. 25:27-34).

Esau is a type of the man of the flesh. He was "a cunning hunter, a man of the field." Evidently he was an athletic, outdoor man of attractive personality, of free and easy-going spirit. He was a hail-fellow-well-met. Had he lived in our day he would have been featured in the rotogravure, would probably have been in the movies, would possibly have been a great athlete, and the good-looking boy who set hearts a-flutter at the country club dance.

He came from the hunt, and he had found nothing. He was hungry. What a type this is of the folly of seeking satisfaction in the world. It never satisfies. For all its glitter and glamour, it is empty and shallow. He had a birthright—a valuable possession in any case, but doubly so as a son of Abraham. But he was hungry, he would simply die if he did not eat. His brother Jacob, inspired by his scheming mother who was not willing to abide God's time for the fulfillment of his promise, had the savory pottage ready to tempt him and he sold his birthright for a "gulf of that red stuff," for so might v. 30 be translated.

One is reminded of a clergyman who attended the Keswick Conference in England. He sent a request for prayer to the platform and asked this question: "I have a habit which is dishonoring to Christ. If I give it up I will die. What shall I do?" The wise and complete answer was one word—"Die." Rather should we lose our body and its desires than to lose our soul.

II. "Whatsoever a Man Soweth That Shall He Also Reap" (Gen. 27:41-45).

Jacob and his mother found that one lie called for another, and ultimately their deceit led (as deceit always does) to the place of reckoning. The law of sowing and reaping is inexorable. Jacob fled from his angry brother. Rebekah thought it would be for "a few days" (v. 44), but it proved to be twenty years, and she never saw her favorite son again.

Let us make no mistake about it. Our sins will always find us out. Even God's people must learn to walk uprightly before Him if they are to walk in peace.

The Season of Hope

Youth is the season of hope, enterprise, and energy, to a nation as well as an individual.—W. R. Williams.

Part of His Plan

I find most help in trying to look on all interruptions and hindrances to work that one has planned out for one's self as discipline, trials, sent by God to help one against getting selfish over one's work.—Annie Keary.

Washington
Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—President Roosevelt, from the time he was Assistant Secretary of the Navy in the Wilson administration, has always been regarded as a friend of the military forces of the United States. He has never been a fanatic about his position but has held consistently to the view that the military services must be protected against continuing political attack which would destroy their usefulness. Likewise, Mr. Roosevelt has constantly argued for a policy of building up the army, navy and marine corps.

Building the Navy

Since he has been in the White House, Mr. Roosevelt has taken care always to see that sound policies of development were invoked as regards the military services and his interest in the navy in this direction has been marked. In consequence, the President has brought about a program of building in the navy that, examined from any angle, must be considered as having established a splendid first line of defense for our country. Whether one favors a big navy or a small navy, I think it must be admitted that the navy is the first line of defense and so the President, being fully acquainted with developments throughout the world, has seen to it that our navy shall be in a strong position as our first line of defense.

It may be, as some critics of the President contend, that the hundreds of millions expended under Mr. Roosevelt's policies constituted too much of a fund in this direction; that we have no need for a navy as large as that now contemplated, and that the creation of a large navy indicated a policy of aggression by the United States. My own feeling is that these objections are not well founded. The turbulent situation in international relations, both in Europe and in Asia, seems to warrant a definite move on the part of the United States to be equipped. In other words, who is there that would wish our nation again to be caught without any worthwhile fighting units ready for action as we were in 1917? Further, although we are a peaceful nation, we must avoid a repetition of the 1917 conditions because we can not afford the waste of money that characterized the building up of our armed forces at that time.

One reason for the comments that I have just made on the navy and President Roosevelt's policies is the fact that we have a new neutrality law. It was passed just a day ahead of the expiration of the temporary neutrality law that was operative during the past year or so.

This new law probably is as good as any neutrality law that can be written. It represents the work of men in congress who are very serious in their desires to create machinery that will keep us out of war, or at least will slow down our entry into international conflict.

It lays down prohibitions against the sale of hundreds of items by American citizens or American corporations to any nation which the President may hold to be a "belligerent" nation, which is the way diplomats describe a nation at war.

The law has a further important and interesting provision. It requires that if any belligerent wants to buy products in this country, commodities that are not prohibited by the neutrality law, it must come to our shores and get them and must pay for them before the boat leaves. Thus, it has come about that the new law is called the "cash and carry" neutrality act.

That title sounds very satisfying. It sounds as though we will never make loans again as we did during the World War—loans never to be repaid except in some minor instances—and that none of our ships will become the targets of foreign gunboats because we are transporting munitions of war to any belligerent. Surely, this phase of the law will in a measure retard our entrance into any war and it will at the same time reduce the excitement in this country incident to the manufacture and sale of munitions of war because of the profits accruing under such circumstances.

But, it strikes me that, after all, this neutrality law is likely to be a rather futile gesture. Having observed governmental action over an extended period of years, I refuse to kid myself. I will not say that the new neutrality act will keep us out of war because, very definitely, it will not.

Let us see why. There are a thousand and one acts that a foreign nation can do to insult our national honor or damage our citizens and their commerce. These are called "overt" acts. When an overt act is committed, it is so easy to forget about the high principles stated in the present neutrality law. It can be repealed and a declaration of war substituted for it almost within twenty-four hours.

There have been a good many millions of citizens of the United States come onto this earth since the armistice of 1918. Among these are undoubtedly many who will learn of the present neutrality law with a feeling of safety; who will think that nothing now can happen and their mothers, wives and sweethearts will feel they need not worry about the time when these younger generations of men will have to march away, with drums beating and flags flying, never to return. For their peace of mind, the present neutrality law certainly is helpful. My suggestion is, however, that they look the facts in the face. When one of these overt acts is committed, in we will go regardless of the neutrality law.

I might advert to some of the things that happened between 1914 and April 6, 1917. President Wilson, a sincere advocate of peace, did the best he could to prevent our participation in the World war. It was a matter that actually brought about his re-election in 1916 because his campaign leaders used the slogan, "He kept us out of war."

Events came through with such startling speed, however, that a month after he was inaugurated for his second term, he was standing on the rostrum before a joint session of congress asking for immediate passage of a resolution placing our country in the war on the side of the Allies and against Germany and the Central Powers. Two days later we were formally in the fight and then, once we were made a belligerent by the decision of our government, it became "a war to make the world safe for democracy."

I think I need not review all of the various slogans that were employed in the national propaganda to solidify our nation behind its military forces. There were many of them. The nation was ninety-five per cent behind the government in a war to end all wars. Hundreds upon hundreds of millions of dollars were borrowed from our citizens who bought, first, liberty bonds and later, victory bonds. For the first time in later history of our nation we had a tremendous national debt, more than ten billions of which were loaned to those nations with which we were associated in the war. The remainder of these funds was spent like money in the hands of a drunken sailor, ashore for the first time in the year. Nor is there criticism to be made of that spending because we were not prepared for war.

So, while I do not now foresee our participation in any conflict within the next few years, I am quite convinced that Mr. Roosevelt has pursued an absolutely sound program in advocating a strong navy and a strong army. It will serve us well and will cost us very much less than if this building up process had to be accomplished overnight as it was in 1917. It may be surprising to a good many people to know that our army at present ranks as number 17 in the list of armies of nations even though our country is one of the largest and one of the richest in the family of nations.

My belief is that if our navy is made to rank with the greatest and plans are worked out as Mr. Roosevelt is trying to work them out so that our army will be possible of expansion, taxpayers' money will be much better spent than through boondoggling or wasted through useless development of theoretical schemes.

As the battle over President Roosevelt's proposal to pack the Supreme court of the United States with six new judges grows in heat, it becomes increasingly evident that members of congress are looking to the political aspects of the situation to a greater extent than obtained in the early stages of the fight. This circumstance certainly is working to the advantage of those who oppose the President's scheme and it is interesting to look at the picture from that angle.

My observation of congressional activities in the past leads me to believe that every President must expect in his second term a certain amount of defection, a certain amount of running away, among the supporters who stood by him unflinchingly during his first term. Of course, most of his stalwarts will stick by him through thick and thin but it always has happened that a rather deep fringe of his party will begin to balk or duck when they reach the second lap and know that the head of their party will not seek election to a third term. The reason must be quite obvious. All members of the house and one-third of the senate membership have to seek votes in their home districts every two years. With a President in his second term, the interest of these candidates for office must turn to what their voters think rather than what the President thinks.

Apache Agent

WHEN, in 1873, old-timers in Arizona learned that a twenty-two-year-old Easterner, fresh from Rutgers college, had been appointed agent for the San Carlos reservation, a gale of laughter swept that section of the Wild West. "Why, them Apache devils will sneer that tenderfoot out inside a week," they guffawed. But they didn't know the stuff that was in John Philip Clum.

Taking charge at San Carlos, he decided that the "terrible Apaches" weren't so terrible if they were treated like human beings instead of animals, as the Spaniard, the Mexican and the American frontiersmen had regarded them. So he made them self-governing by founding the first body of Indian police ever organized to keep order on the reservation and by establishing courts, presided over by Indian judges, to try offenders. He made them partially self-supporting by teaching them the arts of peace instead of war and paid them for the work they did. And above all else he proved to them that he was one white man who didn't "speak with a split tongue."

As a result Clum, within three years, was ruling 5,000 of these Indians, who had been regarded for 300 years as "untamable," without the aid of a single soldier. A physician and a commissary clerk were the only other white men on the reservation.

Next he was given a bigger job—that of capturing a party of hostile Apaches, led by the notorious Geronimo. With a selected party of his loyal Apaches, he marched 400 miles across the deserts and mountains of the Southwest, trapped Geronimo and his followers in New Mexico, captured them without firing a shot and marched them back the whole 400 miles without a single one escaping. This was the only time Geronimo was ever forcibly captured. Several times later he voluntarily surrendered but John P. Clum was the only man who ever took him prisoner when he didn't want to be a captive.

Clum's career of usefulness as agent for the Apaches ended in 1877 when politics brought about a crisis which forced him to resign. He later won fame as an editor and public official in the town of Tombstone but until his death in 1932 he was proudest of the record he made when he was "Apache Agent."

African Victor

HIS NAME is forgotten now but he was once a national hero. For he was the leader in one of the most spectacular exploits in American military history.

William Eaton was his name and he was a native of Connecticut who had come out of the Revolution as a sergeant at the age of seventeen and later won the commission of captain in the American army. In 1798 he was appointed consular agent at Tunis and, by his skill and daring in handling the ruler of that country, he secured for American commerce complete immunity from the Tunisian pirates. But the pirates of Tripoli were still preying upon our shipping and in 1803 Eaton, returning to America, secured from President Jefferson permission to try a plan which would put an end to the war.

He proposed to enlist the services of the deposed Ahmet, brother of Yusuf, ruler of Tripoli, lead an expedition into Tripoli, depose Yusuf and put Ahmet, who would then be friendly to the Americans, on the throne. He was successful in getting Ahmet's promise to aid him and early in 1805 he started out from Alexandria, Egypt, with his army of 400 men consisting of nine Americans, 40 Greeks, 28 artillerymen of various European nationalities and the remainder Egyptians, Turks and Arabs, to capture the town of Derna.

His was an epic journey of 500 days across the desert. During that time Eaton not only had to endure the hardships of a country in which the thermometer never dropped below 120 degrees but he also had to quell a mutiny, led by the man he was trying to put on the throne—Ahmet himself. But finally they reached Derna and there with some aid from three small American warships, Eaton and his men stormed the defenses of Derna, put to rout the 800 defenders of the city and took possession.

For several weeks afterwards he beat off the attacks of the enemy but in June he was ordered to evacuate the city by his government which thus threw away the victory he had so splendidly won. The only good that came out of his expedition was that some of the American seamen seized by the Tripolitans were exchanged for prisoners Eaton seized when he captured Derna. Eaton returned to the United States where he was hailed as a hero for a time. But he was soon forgotten and he died, broken-hearted and in poverty, in 1811.

Bedtime Story for Children

PETER RABBIT GETS HIS WISH

JUMPER THE HARE, who is Peter Rabbit's big cousin and had come down from the Great Green Forest, had seen very little of Peter lately because he disliked to leave the Green Forest, and ever since he had seen those strange tracks deep in the Green Forest Peter had kept close to the dear Old Briar Patch. So Jumper had not heard Peter's story, which nobody believed and about which ev-

"I—I Knew You Wouldn't Believe Me. Nobody Does," said Peter sadly.

Everybody teased Peter whenever they saw him. One moonlight night Jumper took it into his head to visit his cousin and find out why he had been keeping so close to the dear Old Briar Patch.

First making sure that the way was clear, for Jumper is very, very timid, he scampered across to the Old Briar Patch as fast as his long legs could take him and was quite out of breath when he got there. He found Peter sitting under a bramble bush looking quite as miserable as he felt.

"Hello, Cousin Peter! Where have you been keeping yourself lately? I haven't seen you or your tracks in the Green Forest for days and days. Are you sick?" asked Jumper.

"No," replied Peter shortly, "I'm not sick, but I guess I will be if this keeps up much longer." Peter looked very glum and unhappy. "If what keeps up?" asked Jumper, looking very much puzzled. "Having everybody make fun of me every time I show myself, and nobody to believe what I say," replied Peter.

Jumper looked more puzzled than ever. "That is bad, Cousin Peter," said he. "It's bad enough to be made fun of. I know all about that. Everybody makes fun of me because I have such long legs and because I am so timid. I've grown used to it now, but still I don't enjoy being laughed at. But it's a whole lot worse not to have people believe what you tell them. I had a whole lot rather have people laugh at me than to say the things they do about Sammy Jay. No one believes him even when he does tell the truth, and that's perfectly dreadful."

"I know it," said Peter mournfully. "That's the trouble with me now. I've been telling the truth and no one believes it. Now they never will believe anything I say, and they'll think of me just as they do of Sammy Jay, and say the same dreadful things about me."

"But what is it that they don't believe? You haven't told me," insisted Jumper the Hare.

"I—I—don't want to tell you because probably you won't believe me either," replied Peter. Now, this wasn't quite true. At least part wasn't. He did want to tell. He fairly ached to tell. But he was afraid that Jumper wouldn't believe his story. But after Jumper had solemnly promised that he would believe, no matter how hard it was to tell, Peter told him all about his visit to the deepest part of the Green Forest and about the great big strange tracks he had found there in the snow—tracks as big as Farmer Brown's boy's, only different, and showing the marks of great claws.

Jumper had pricked up his long ears at the mention of those strange tracks, and now he was sitting up very straight and staring at Peter with his eyes very wide open.

"I—I knew you wouldn't believe me. Nobody does," said Peter sadly.

"But I do!" cried Jumper. "I've seen tracks just like those lots and lots of times way off in the Great Woods where I came from. I was just surprised that there should be any down here in the Green Forest. Of course I believe you, Cousin Peter. I think I will go see them for myself. It's a long time since I have seen any."

"Oh, I'm so glad!" cried Peter happily. At last his wish had come true—he had found some one to believe him. He was so happy over it that he quite forgot to ask Jumper who could have made the strange tracks.

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE

By Roger B. Whitman

PREVENTING PAINT FROM PEELING

A FRIEND recently wrote me of trouble with peeling paint:

"On the east wall of my house there is a small window of a bathroom with a flat frame four inches wide. The surface is practically flush with the stucco. Within two years after that frame was painted for the first time, the paint began to peel, and it has continued to peel after each repainting."

He wants to know where the trouble lies; why paint should peel on that particular window frame, and nowhere else.

The most usual cause for the peeling of paint is moisture in the wood. On a dry and warm day, the moisture is drawn out through the surface and breaks the paint away from the wood. With this in mind, my friend's problem is to find out how moisture gets into the wood. Until he does so, paint on that frame will continue to peel.

One possibility is that moisture enters the wood from inside. Being a bathroom window, steam and moisture in the room air may easily be responsible. In that case much or all of the trouble can be averted by giving all of the inside parts of the window two coats of high quality spar varnish, or one coat of aluminum paint followed by spar varnish or enamel.

As the window is on an east wall, it is exposed to the drive of easterly storms. A heavy wind forces water into any cracks there may be, no matter how fine. Quite possibly the window frame does not make an absolutely tight joint with the stucco. Again, a window on the floor above may be responsible, or a crack in the upper part of the wall. Water entering a wall runs down

THE DIAL OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WE FIND it easy to forget The songs we heard, the smiles we met, We find it easy to remember The faithless friend, the fading ember.

Yet memories are things to choose, This to recall and that refuse, Make each delight or each disaster Either our servant or our master.

Yes, we who turn the dial of life Need not remember care and strife, The tawdry tune, the tinny meter, For there are other programs sweeter.

We know that other things life has Than jumbles of discordant jazz. We turn the dial, and very near it Pick up a tune that lifts the spirit.

And thoughts are things we may control To help or hurt the listening soul.

Tune out the sad, tune in the pleasant, Tune out the past, tune in the present.

Yes, so may one control the mind, Tune out the mean, tune in the kind, Old ills forgetting and forgiving, Only the lovely things re-living.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis

© Public Ledger, Inc.

OCCASIONALLY one meets a man or woman who seems to delight in applying elaborate rules of reasoning to practically everything in life. And yet despite this ceaseless analyzing, such an individual never seems to get much accomplished. The reason, of course, is that so much mental effort and time are consumed in the dissection of whys and wherefores that initiative and action which get things done are bound to suffer.

Look carefully at the second finger of such a person and very likely you will find the characteristics which this lesson points out.

The Overlogical Finger of Saturn. Excessive length and leanness, protruding knobby knuckles and absence of flexibility are the outstanding indications in this type of second finger.

With the fingers extended and pressed together such a finger of Saturn will be found to have far greater length than that of the forefinger, which sometimes seems quite dwarfed by comparison. The spaces between the knuckles seem disproportionately long. The nail is usually narrow or "pinched" in form and is often deeply set.

A second finger of this type usually inclines toward the forefinger when the hand is extended.

One may look for hyperlogical mentality with second fingers of this type, one that is likely to carry logic far beyond normal bounds, and in business particularly one that frequently argues away possibilities of profit from ventures which are real opportunities.

"WHY Mollie R., are you going out again? My own mother has become a gadabout and all because she made herself such a pretty new dress. Really, Ma, those soft graceful lines make you look lots slimmer. I think the long rippling collar has a good deal to do with it. Or maybe it's because the skirt fits where it should and has plenty of room at the bottom."

"Yes, My Darling Daughter."

"Daughter, dear, how you do run on! Imitate Sis; put your apron on and have the dusting done when I get back from the Civic Improvement League meeting. And speaking of aprons, that is the cleverest one Sis ever had. I love the way it crosses in the back."

"So do I, Mom, and see how it covers up my dress all over. Good-by, Mom, have a good time."

Sisterly Chit Chat.

"Sis, run upstairs for my apron, won't you? I wouldn't have a spot on this, my beloved model, for all the world. It's my idea of smooth: all these buttons; no belt; these here new puffed sleeves; and this flare that's a flare."

"Just you wait, Miss, till I grow up! Your clothes won't have a look in because I've already begun to Sew-My-Own. All right, I'm going."

And so on well into the afternoon!
